From there, I can quickly identify the best photos to take with the video camera I'm carrying on my shoulder. It's much easier for me to edit these photos in Lightroom than in my camera. I use Lightroom on my iPhone and Mac, so I'm also able to edit my photos in real time. Since my work is always driven by visual imagery, I can put every last drop of creativity into my photos. I don't think Lightroom's latest improvements will have much effect on my workflow, but if you a fan of the file structure or just like the way it's implemented, this may be the release for you. It's a great way to work, but the combination of a mouse and keyboard can quickly become overwhelming.
